Family matters were aired in city court Thursday afternoon, when Anthony Martin was arraigned for non-support of his wife and one child. Both parents are young and the child is but six months of age. Martin said that he was willing to support his wife but that she would not live with him all of the time. The court, while he had to make a long visit to her mother, the wife, on the other hand, told her to leave him and after both had said their piece, Martin was sentenced to spend the next 30 days in jail. Later, his brother appeared before the court and the respondent was brought back from jail. The brother said that he would guarantee $100 a week if the man was liberated. Martin was also willing to take up the burden and the case was continued until November 1, when, if the wife does not hold, Martin will be arrested again.

H. S. Howard, secretary of the new Burlington union station committee, has just received information from E. W. Lawrence, general attorney of the Rutland railroad, advising him that the architect's plans for the Burlington station are substantially complete, and that descriptions will be drawn for the agreement between the companies and the city, and also in order that the proposed changes may be better understood. The terms of the agreement are substantially agreed upon, but they will not become binding upon the companies until approved by their directors. As soon as he is relieved from some present court work Mr. Lawrence desires to meet the Burlington committee and go over the situation more in detail. A reading of the proposed agreement between the city and the railroad, the committee, which is composed of Mayor J. E. Burke, Aldermen Drew, Dion and Crane and W. E. Burt, J. J. Whalen, Gardner Brewer and H. S. Howard, will recommend to the citizens whether or not Burlington should contribute a share of some of the expense of the construction of the new station and its street approaches.

The repairs which are being made to the Hotel Champlain at the corner of King and Battery streets were brought to a summary halt when sections of the veranda fell at different times Friday night and Saturday morning. Fortunately no one was injured and this is the more remarkable view of the fact that the veranda projects out over the sidewalk. The building is one of the oldest in the city and until recently pillars have supported a veranda which extended across the front of the hotel. When the alterations were made the pillars were removed and it was thought the veranda could be held up by means of braces. These were placed in position but the bolts did not hold in the decayed wood. The veranda fell of its own weight as no one was in it. Incidentally, the city will probably recover some land as the old veranda projected over the sidewalk a distance of three and a half feet. No application was made to the building inspector for permission to make the alterations and the other evidently went ahead with his own initiative. Yesterday the ruins of the veranda were removed off. It is said that only a few minutes before the veranda fell some people were standing beneath it.

VERMONT CIVIL ENGINEERS

State Association in This City for Annual Fall Outing.

Trips Made to Essex Junction Dam, High Bridge and Gorge—Address by C. C. Covert of U. S. Geological Survey.

The second annual fall outing of the Vermont Association of Civil Engineers was held in this city yesterday with an attendance of more than 50. Those included, in addition to the civil engineers proper, many interested in road building and other phases of the work. Practically all of the business of the association is transacted at the annual meeting held in March of each year, and yesterday was mainly given to pleasure. A feature of the meeting was an address in the evening by C. C. Covert, who is a district engineer in the United States Geological Survey. His subject was Hydrographic Surveys and was well illustrated. The address was given in the dining room of the Hotel Vermont, where headquarters were established.

The business meeting was of brief duration and was called to order by President Carlton. Secretary Reed made a short report in which he told of receiving ten applications for membership which will be voted on at the next meeting to be more than double those of two years ago when the society was founded. At the business meeting, held in the roof garden, the following committees were appointed to keep in touch with their subjects and keep the association informed:

Public Policy: W. H. Vane, St. Albans; A. E. Whitlow, Northfield; E. A. Walker, Montpelier.

Roads and pavements: H. M. McIntosh, Burlington; A. C. Grover, Rutland; P. N. Sweet, Middlebury.

Power development and mechanical and electrical science: P. H. Parker, Burlington; E. D. Allen, Brandon; Edward Robinson, Burlington.

Railroads: F. O. Sheldahl, Burlington; J. G. Sheldahl, Rutland; F. W. Denison, St. Albans.

Sanitation and public health: J. W. Votey, Burlington; P. H. Cranford, Burlington; L. E. Dix, Northfield.

The meeting was planned for those interested in hydrographic surveying for in addition to the address the working side of the work was shown at Essex Junction where the large dam of the Burlington Light & Power company is in process of construction. The engineers left on a special electric car for the dam, following the business meeting. After an inspection of that they visited the cement bridge being placed across the Winslow river at the line bridge by J. E. Cushman. The third stop was at the gorge, where the Burlington Light & Power company is reconstructing its dam.

Following the regular dinner was served at the Hotel Vermont. A special table was placed for their accommodation, as this was deemed an advisable time-saving plan. As soon as the dining room was cleared, Mr. Covert gave his lecture.

Mr. Covert's address proved a very interesting one and was amply illustrated with slides picturing streams and gauging stations through New York and New England. The subject was hydrographic surveying and had to do mostly with stream flows and methods of measuring them. One of the slides was of Cayuga Falls, Vermont, where a gauging station is located. The talk was a general one which a layman could understand and enjoy. It was about an hour and a half in duration. Mr. Covert has given similar addresses before many engineering schools, and this afternoon will speak before the students of Middlebury College.

A CATHEDRAL WEDDING.

Dr. E. A. de Varennes and Miss Mary Whelan Married Yesterday Morning.

Miss Mary Loretta Whelan, daughter of C. E. Whelan and Dr. Edward Arthur de Varennes of Pittsfield, Mass., was married yesterday morning at St. Mary's Cathedral in the presence of a large gathering of friends. The Rev. J. P. Gillis performed the ceremony, which was followed by a nuptial mass. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Ruth Whelan, and the best man was George P. de Varennes of Pittsfield, a brother of the groom. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with woodbine and hydrangeas. Miss Joseph Buzon presided at the organ, Master Timothy Daley played the violin and Master Bernard Beecher played the flute.

The bride was beautifully gowned in a dress of ivory lace, trimmed with pearls and carried a white prayer book. She wore a large picture hat of black velvet trimmed with ostrich plumes and the only piece of jewelry worn was a beautiful cameo brooch which was the gift of the groom. The bridesmaid was attired in pink and wore a charming white mesh and carried red carnations. She wore a black velvet hat.

Following the ceremony at the church the party proceeded to the home of the bride, 123 North avenue, where the wedding breakfast was served to the immediate family. The party then left on the noon train for their wedding trip to New York city and they will sail from there Sunday for the Bermudas. They will be at home after November 1st in Lee, Mass.

The bride is one of Burlington's most popular and well liked young ladies and was the recipient of many gifts of cut glass, linen and silverware. She was showered twice last week by many of her friends, the second being by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Uthmanians of which order she is financial secretary. The groom was a former resident of this place, having been employed for a number of years with James A. Kelley in the clothing business at the Daylight corner. He was also identified for several years with L. F. Wood's clothing store. The couple are now on their honeymoon at the Ontario Veterinary College at Ontario, Canada, in the class of 1913. During his vacation periods he associated himself with his cousin, Dr. J. H. McAllister, of Lee, Mass., who is also a veterinarian. Dr. de Varennes will open an office on his own account, either in Lee, or some town in Connecticut which he has in view. The wedding pair have the congratulations and good wishes of the many friends they leave in this city.

SCHOOL BOYS AND ROADS

(From the Rutland Record.)
The Bennington County Improvement association's plan to award a prize to the rural school which keeps the road for an eighth of a mile in front of the schoolhouse in best condition is worthy of imitation all over the State. Believes that has taken up a commendable project to build a candidate at the new public playground.

STATE W. C. T. U. IN SESSION

80 Unions in Vermont, with Approximate Membership of 1,300.

Liquor Fighters Urge Renewed Effort against the Fundamental Problem of the Saloon—Energy Should Be Concentrated.

Mrs. Mary B. Wilson of Philadelphia was the principal speaker yesterday at the convention of the Vermont W. C. T. U., which was formally opened at 8:30 a. m. She spoke in the temple at the afternoon session, at which she also conducted a question box, and at the evening meeting in the First Church she spoke in a reminiscent vein of her work, experiences and travels. Among her suggestions she made the point that W. C. T. U. workers should write to publishers of books and periodicals protesting against the portrayal in fiction of heroes who use characters as liquor. Annette W. Parmelee was also a speaker yesterday, discussing the success of social franchise in the United States.

The afternoon session opened with a devotional service. Mrs. A. R. Clark, spoke upon school savings banks and Mrs. S. K. Huse of St. Johnsbury Center, speaking for Mrs. L. A. Munger, discussed "The Press." The Rev. John M. Paige, pastor of the Every Day Church, and founder of the Vermont W. C. T. U., declared that prohibition is enforced in Maine at the present time more strictly than ever before. A series of resolutions to the contrary. He has just returned from the Pine Tree State, where he made many inquiries upon this point. Mrs. E. W. Nash spoke upon "Anti-Narcotics," and Mrs. E. L. Wyman of Manchester Center, upon "Moral Education."

When pledges for State work were called for, $5 was raised in five minutes—more than last year's total. Confirmed members of the Vermont W. C. T. U., and the white ribbon was placed upon her small dress. At the conclusion of Mrs. Wyman's talk upon social purity it was voted that the meeting of the department of medical temperance be postponed until today and that the State medical society, now in temporary convention here, be asked to send a representative to meet the ladies there.

At the evening meeting Mrs. Ida Miles recited "The Cry of the Nation," and Mrs. Ida H. Reed spoke briefly upon "Your Part." There was music, and the opening song service was led by Mrs. Annie Carter.

The exact number in attendance will not be known until after roll call at the election of officers today, but it is perhaps the largest at any of the organization's 20 conventions held up to the present time.

At the morning session Mrs. Minnie L. Pearson, the secretary, reported a total of 80 unions in Vermont with about 1,300 members. Receipts were $1,050 and the balance on hand was $225.

Mrs. Gracie H. Davidson, the president, in her address, pleaded for renewed effort against the fundamental problem of the saloon and warned against scattering of energy in temperance work. The address of Mrs. Davidson was full of hope for the future and contained many practical suggestions for the work throughout the State. Mrs. Davidson spoke of the "Call to Service," issued by the union upon its members through the help of God. The call is divine. St. Paul's call was no more wonderful than would be to us if a leading brewer or distiller should become an earnest temperance worker. The speaker referred to the chosen leaders of 1840 and drew a lesson of hope from their lives. Great emergencies call for great leaders and God's promise to us and guide those workers of old was fully fulfilled.

A brief review of our temperance work in Vermont shows that wherever a leader has fallen by the way or has been excused from further service some one has risen to take the place. The list of our former State presidents shows how many have served and how and how the time has come for new leadership. During the last 20 years service as president has been in the State work, having served six years as State superintendent of hygiene, 10 years as corresponding secretary, and five years as president, and while adding to be released from the responsibilities of this office, I have no other plan than to March Along Together, doing such work as other duties will permit. The call of service must be sounding in the heart of some one of our midst, and God bless the chosen one."

There are too many side issues in the union today, which are good in themselves, but which are detrimental to the main work of the union. Perhaps the State union is making a mistake in trying to carry so many departments.

The speaker told of the work of the Floating Hospital in Boston which has been helped by the Vermont union to the State of Maine.

Mrs. Davidson spoke of the problem of the moving picture theatres and said that there was a field for the union to do practical work.

Mrs. Davidson made a strong plea for the fundamental work of the union, that of battling against the destroyer of the home—the saloon. Mrs. Davidson then went on to tell of some of the many encouragements in the work speaking of the change in the attitude of railroads and transportation companies in regard to hiring employees who do not drink.

WOMEN WHAT HE GOT

"Sure, Casey was a fine fellow."
"He was that a fine fellow, Casey."
"And a cheerful man was Casey—the cheeriest man I ever knew."
"Casey was a generous man, too."
"Generous, you say. Well, I don't know so much about that. Did Casey ever buy you anything?"
"Well, nearly. One day he came into Flaherty's barroom, where he and my friends were drinking, and he said to us: 'Well, men, when are we going to have a "rah o' snow?'"

UNIVERSITY NOTES.

The faculty and student council of last year met Monday afternoon. Professor Perkins suggested a system of rotation in office which would provide for a rotation in membership, yet would keep some of the old members on the council each year. It was also voted that two young women representatives at large be added to the council.

Much enthusiasm was shown at the formation of a new college debating society Monday night, where were 46 present. President Benton and Professor Alken spoke. The constitution was read and adopted and the following officers were elected: President, H. Alton Bailey, '15; vice-president, D. W. Howe; recording secretary, J. B. Sanford; corresponding secretary, L. M. Prindle; treasurer, J. V. Piper.

At a junior class meeting, held yesterday morning, it was voted to abolish the Ariel this year and to publish a class book, which will probably come out the first part of the senior year. The same officers as those elected to the Ariel board will have charge. A constitution was adopted. The same officers which were elected at an unconstitutional meeting a week ago were elected, with the exception of president, Leon W. Dean of Bristol now filling that office.
